On a farm in the countryside of Vacaria, in Rio Grande do Sul (RS), there was a chicken coop with 30 chickens, 3 roosters, 1 male duck and 6 female ducks.

They all lived together and were happy, as there was a lot of respect between them.

The roosters took care of the chickens and the big duck took care of the female ducks.

Numbers are important for counting, sorting and measuring.

Everything was going very well, until a truck with cages arrived at the farm.

Mister João, owner of the farm, left his house in a hurry and began to collect all the female ducks and put them in the truck's cages.

A farm is a small rural property.

A duck is a bird that lives in a family.

Mister João did not consider the situation of solitude that would be that duck without his female ducks in the chicken coop.

At first, the big duck was surprised to have been left alone. Afterwards, he became disgusted with the situation and started to fight with the roosters and chickens for anything.

When the big duck couldn't find a rooster to bother him, he would poke the chickens. The peace that was in that chicken coop was slowly being forgotten...
The situation was unsupportable.

Despite its size, the garnisé was not intimidated by the big duck. He would have to put an end to that situation. So he summoned all the chickens and roosters to a "secret meeting" to deal with the big duck situation.

The chicken coop are the homes of the chickens and ducks.

At first, there were many reports from both chickens and roosters about the big duck's attitudes.

The garnisé, the smallest of all in the chicken coop, listened attentively and said:

- Brothers, we have to plan the resumption of peace in our lives. Complaining alone will not help us.

One of the older chickens started by giving the garnisé a "cold bath":

- Look at your garnisé size, how will you face that 3 kg big duck, which is triple your weight, and beat him?

A garnisé is a little rooster.

Another chicken said:

- Do we have no solution to this problem?

Then the garnisé climbed into a tall box in the chicken coop and spoke loudly:

- If we unite to fight the big duck he won't have a chance with us.

The garnisé continued:

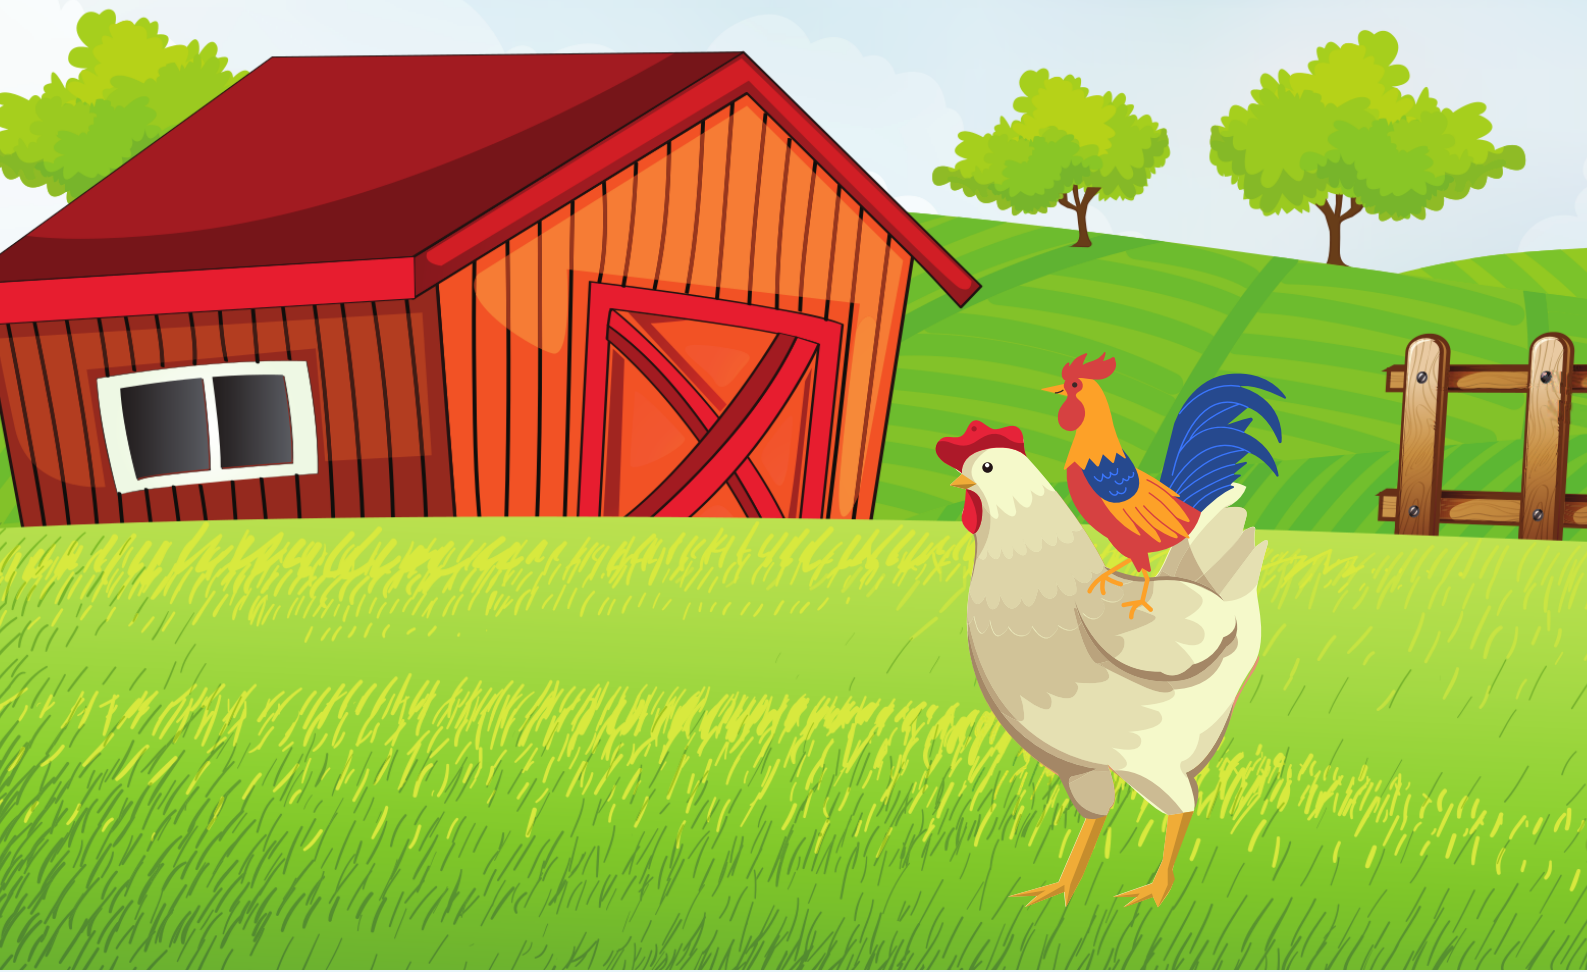

- How about we organize a duel to decide the leadership in the chicken coop, with everyone's help?

A chicken then asked:

- And who would duel with the duck?

The garnisé replied:

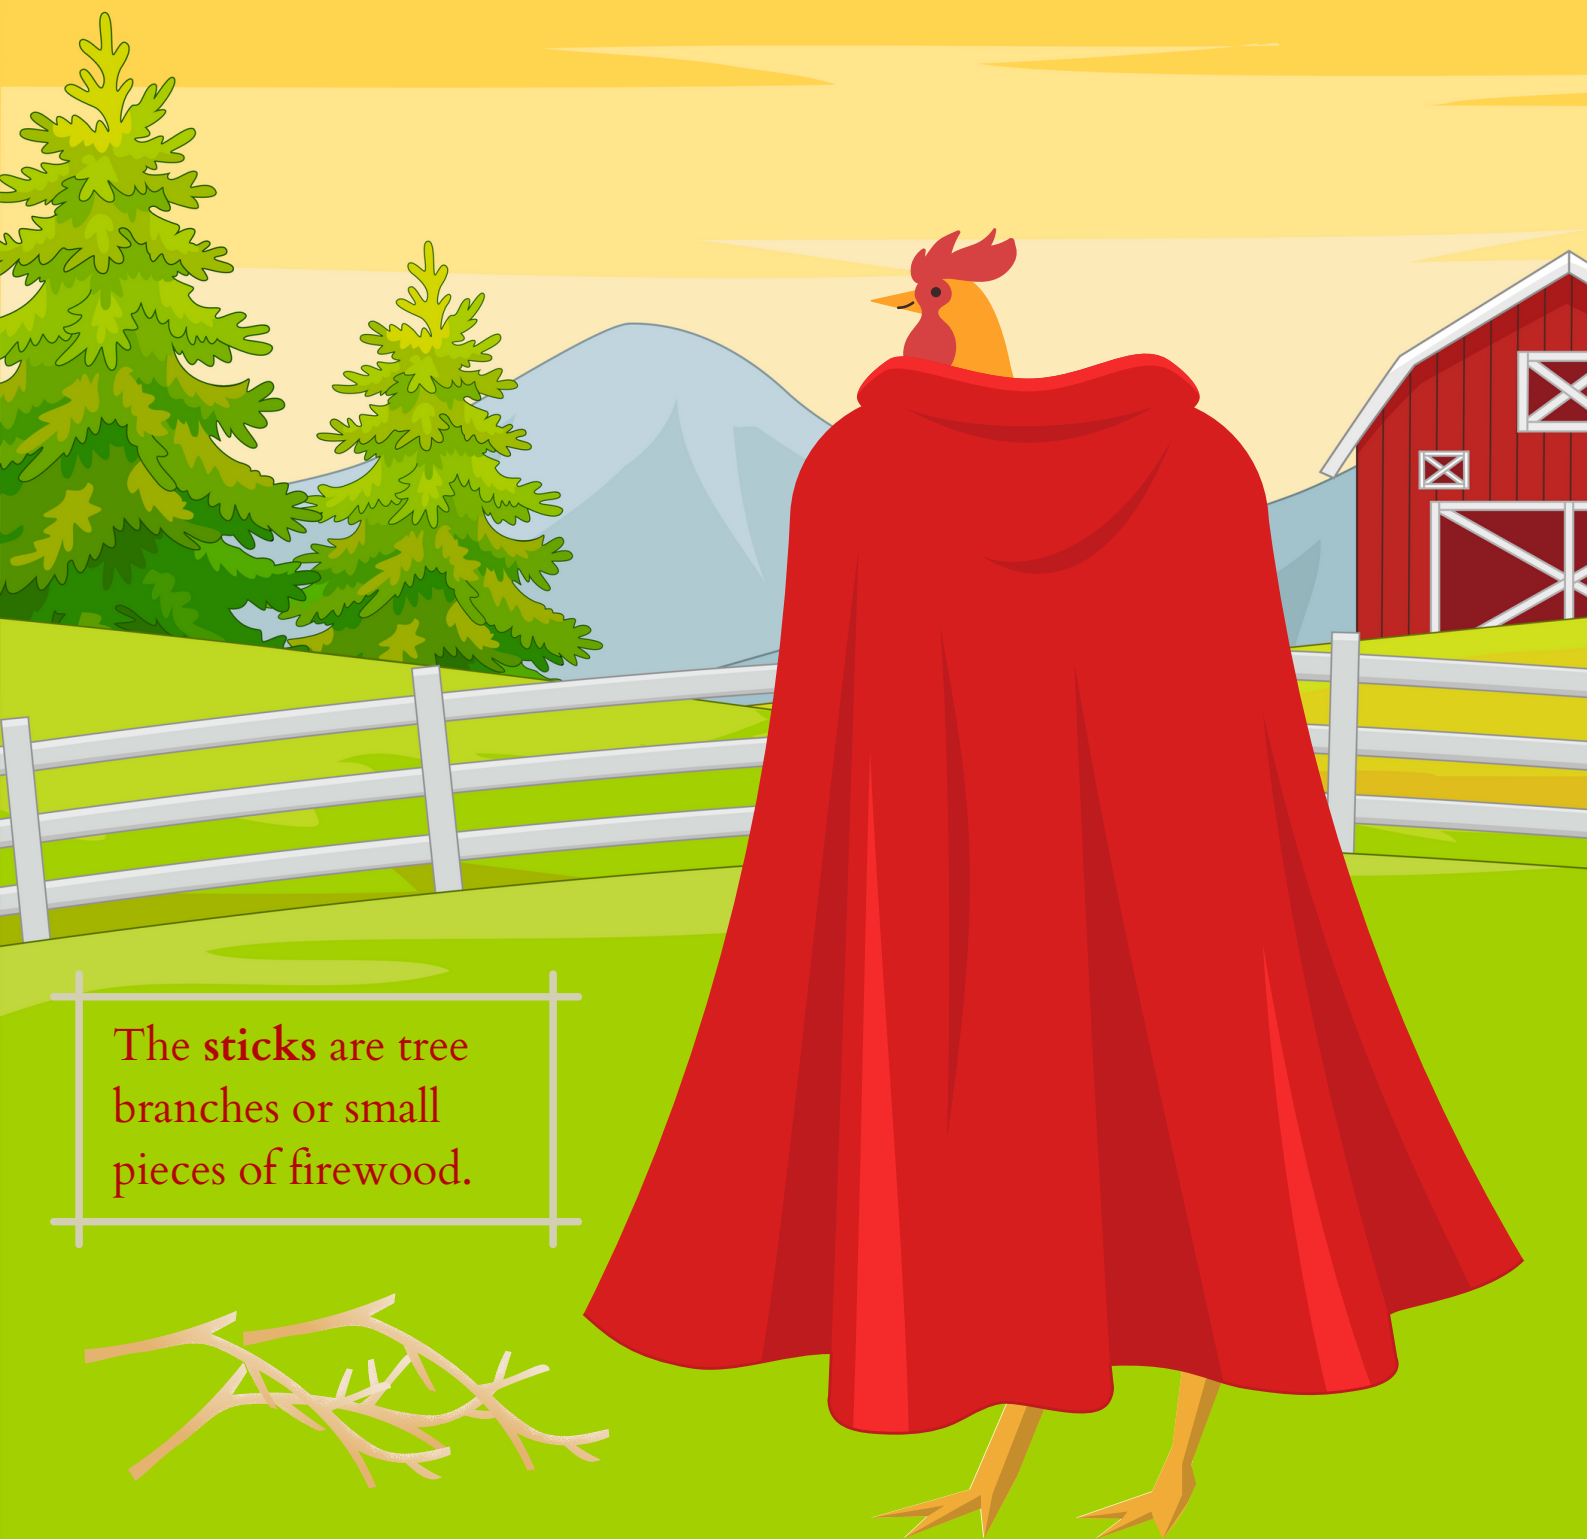

- We! I'm the only rooster in a position to fight, but I don't have the weight and height to face the duck. Now, if I climb on a robust chicken that weighs almost 3 kg, we can face the big duck.

However, the garnisé pointed out:

- We need to train the fighting commands so that we can fight as one.

So, after the meeting, a robe was made that would make the chicken and garnisé as if it were a "huge rooster". In addition, they organized some sticks to throw in the big duck.

The sticks are tree branches or small pieces of firewood.

After everything was ready, the day of the approach arrived.

The duck was distracted resting under a tree and was surrounded by everyone in the chicken coop.

The garnisé became huge, mounted on the hen. The duck was so scared that he ran away from the duel.

So they managed to teach the big duck a lesson.

The defeated big duck understood that he shouldn't fight with his friends.

And so, peace returned to the chicken coop, through the intelligence and courage of the smallest rooster.
